Dear Miss Irving and Miss Cryer,

Before we start, we would like to thank you for taking the time to read our letter. We truly acknowledge the busy schedule of a teacher and appreciate your care towards the school's library.

We are writing to persuade you to allow pupils to participate in the nature reading club. This club includes taking library books outside during students' Break time and Lunch time as well as inviting students who do not particularly enjoy outdoor games to a plethora of reading. One should point out the ever growing question : would children be rough with the books? Of course, the idea of pupils using books as basketballs horrifies us as much as you. Thankfully, we have a plan of action. Members of this club will only be sensible minds approved by you or their teacher and each child will receive a card meaning they have permission to take books outside. If any member is caught ill-using the books their permission card will be confiscated until further notice.

So far the newly furnished library has been a success, so why not this? We have witnessed increasing effort in taking care of the school library, meaning students have been blessed with finding the perfect book for them. You know what it feels like to find that book. You just cannot stop reading! So even more time would be more beneficial as not only would it increase the member's intelligence, they would be taken on a vivid adventure during their break. Do you really want children to not be able to experience that?

We comprehend the commitment it would be for the teachers and staff and can understand that slight changes may be necessary. Please consider our ideas and get back to us soon.

Yours Sincerely,

Evie
